EDGE and Dubai Police to Advance Policing Technology and Specialist Training

- The agreement brings Dubai Police's operational experience into the development of EDGE's solutions for law enforcement

Abu Dhabi, UAE: EDGE has signed a Memorandum of Understanding with Dubai Police at World Police Summit 2026, held at the Dubai World Trade Centre. Lieutenant General Abdulla Khalifa Al Marri, Commander-in-Chief of Dubai Police, and Hamad Al Marar, Managing Director and CEO, EDGE, signed the agreement, which establishes a framework for cooperation in policing technologies and specialist training.

Dubai Police will share operational and technical expertise, including practical experience, feedback on products and solutions, and contributions to the evaluation of new technologies. It will also identify training needs for its personnel and coordinate operational requirements, while leading on strategic innovation and future readiness by identifying future security challenges and developing foresight-driven initiatives.

EDGE will provide annual hands-on training sessions and specialised courses for technicians and specialists. It will also offer logistical support when required, including models and prototypes for display and training purposes, as well as services for the disposal of expired or surplus ammunition upon request.

The collaboration reflects EDGE's commitment to working alongside UAE law enforcement agencies as a long-term partner, combining operational insight with advanced technology and building specialist technical skills through practical training.
